A crew chief marshals from the 19th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron out a C-130J assigned to the 41st Airlift Squadron headed to Peru in aid in flood relief operations April 4 at Little Rock Air Force Base. Heavy rains bolstered by the El Niño pattern have caused massive flooding across Peru. The goal is to assist Peruvians in recovering from this natural disaster as well as re-establishing normalcy to their lives and ease suffering caused by the flooding.

EXERCISE

Team Little Rock recently concluded a major accident response inspection March 30 near Little Rock Air Force Base. The goal of the day-long exercise was to test the host unit's capabilities of responding to an aircraft mishap. The event was evaluated by the 19th Airlift Wing Inspector General.

LRAFB prepares to sustain combat airlift

STORY BY SENIOR AIRMAN MERCEDES TAYLOR

19TH AIRLIFT WING

Team Little Rock recently concluded a major accident response inspection on March 30 near Little Rock Air Force Base.

The goal of the day-long exercise was to test the host unit's capabilities of responding to an aircraft mishap. The event was evaluated by the 19th Airlift Wing Inspector General.

During the exercise, a downed-aircraft tested emergency first responders. Items such as aircraft parts and simulated flare shells were arranged to replicate debris.

"This was a total TLR exercise," said U.S. Air Force Maj. Julie Honeycutt, 19th Inspector General director of inspections. "All units from the 19th AW participated with the 314th and 189th Airlift Wings along with the 913th Airlift Group."

Two months of planning and coordination were necessary to prepare and ensure the success of the base-wide exercise.

"The overall base response was excellent," U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Jeffery Clouse, 19th IG superintendent said. "Units responded with urgency and displayed an outstanding level of technical expertise. In the end, the base accomplished several exercise objectives and got an opportunity to work with our partners in a safe yet challenging environment."

Testing the base's capabilities not only promotes readiness but enhances local partnerships by integrating with other units.

"The exercise will benefit the base by testing the dynamic command and control that is required when four different organizations are involved," Honeycutt said. "Additionally, it gave people the opportunity to use equipment that they are trained on, but might not use on a day-to-day basis."

Little Rock AFB, assigned to Air Mobility Command, is known as the Home of Combat Airlift. Continuing to train and test the unit's capabilities enhances the ability to provide combat airlift anywhere, anytime.

Security forces safeguard base with new equipment

19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The 19th Security Forces Squadron uses new scanning devices to expedite base entry and increase intelligence about possible crimes, keeping service members and their families safe.

The Defense Biometric Identification System, or DBIDS, is used by military bases to enhance the force protection mission of defending the installation by controlling authorized access at the installations entry control points.

"With the increased speed of the handheld units, Defenders will be able to scan more identification cards, which will result in a safer community," said Jeffery Bardsley, 19th SFS plans and programs chief.

The devices provide real-time alerts about individuals requesting access to base which allows installation entry controllers to assess the situation and act accordingly. Base entry is not only safer, but faster with DBIDS by allowing authorized people through the gates in less time.

"This system is always being upgraded and advanced so it can be used throughout the base at various security forces sites, including the Pass and Registration office and the visitors center," said U.S. Air Force Tech. Sgt. Angelina Horton, 19th SFS installation access NCO in charge.

The system gives security forces access to biographical and biometric data – such as Department of Defense identification numbers and fingerprints – to verify the identity of the individual before they enter the base.

"There is a great benefit to using DBIDS at Little Rock Air Force Base," Horton said. "It makes life easier by reducing time spent entering the installation, and it helps ensure the right people are coming onto the installation."

From safe and accurate installation access, to generating visitor passes and contractor cards at the Pass and Registration office and the visitors center. Defenders are now more equipped at detecting potential risks and safeguard against those possibilities.

ANG graduates first class from Cyber Skills Validation Course

By Staff Sgt. John E. Hillier
Air National Guard Public Affairs

The Air National Guard and Air Force Space Command graduated the first class from the Cyber Skills Validation Course during a ceremony held March 29 at Little Rock Air Force Base.

The 20 Airmen in this class represent the leading edge of a concerted Air Force effort to train and develop the Airmen needed to fulfill future cyber missions.

The Cyber Skills Validation Course is designed to tap into the wealth of skill that reserve component Airmen already possess through their civilian careers, and turn them into the mission-capable troops in high demand by state and national leaders.

"This course builds on the knowledge, skills and ability that students have previously learned and validates that they have what it takes to serve in the cyber warfare career field," said Capt. Scott Anderson, 189th Operations Group Detachment 1 director of operations. "We are very proud of the students and we have the utmost confidence in our graduates being successful."

The seven week long course consists of training in several critical mission areas, including digital forensics, industrial control systems and vulnerability assessments – curriculum that the formal technical training course covers over seven months.

"I want to be able to take a cyber warrior out of any technology company, put them into our work force and validate the skills they already have," said Director of the Air National Guard, Lt. Gen. L. Scott Rice. "I also want to be able to take young Airmen just joining the Guard and make them cyber warriors from day one. We should be able to adapt to both ends of that spectrum; we're innovative. We're Airmen. And that's why I'm so excited to be able to look these Airmen in the eye, present their cyber wings, and say 'Thanks for stepping up to the challenge.'"

Placing the course in the care of the 189th Airlift Wing, based at Little Rock AFB, made financial sense for the Air Force.

"The ANG had an existing secure facility, which made it the perfect location for a cyber mission," said Anderson. "Additionally, with the infrastructure on Little Rock Air Force Base and its long history of training, it made perfect sense."

The ANG anticipates it will graduate 60 Airmen from the course in Fiscal Year 2017, with that number expected to increase to 80 graduates per year beginning in 2018. Following the CSVC, Airmen go on to Initial Qualification Training and Mission Qualification Training courses.

Gym revamps 24/7 access system for Airmen

By Senior Airman
Mercedes Taylor
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The Fitness and Sports Center is revamping their 24/7 access system.

The new system will provide chipped access cards for beneficiaries who do not have Common Access Cards.

Requirements to sign up for around-the-clock Fitness Access are proof of government ID, specifically a Common Access Card, retiree or dependent ID. Pre-registration is already available inside the gym at the main desk.

Once the previous system is disabled, all gym patrons wanting 24/7 access will need to be registered with the Fitness Access system to gain gym access afterhours. Those registered under the previous system will not be able to access the fitness center after April 6.

The goal of Fitness Access is to better accommodate Airmen and families who may not have access to the gym during regular business hours.

"Some Airmen, like shift workers, don't have access to the gym during business hours," said Aaron Leach, 19th Force Support Squadron fitness and sports director. "Without gym access, they can't be fit to fight."
